ry exercises, we concluded to retain our seats.

Immediately beneath, the Polonaise was most beautifully entered into by the party, and, as given on the Continent, was far. superior to the tripplingly executed mongrel, falsely so-called, with us.

In one of the changes of the dance, each lady in turn is led to the centre, when she is danced around by the gentlemen, while she, holding her handkerchief in her hand, twirls it in the air, and becomes the partner of him who has the agility to gain possession of it. This had often been replated, with much harmless mirth, when we observed a female, more sumptuously dressed than her companions, enter the circle, and as a tall man in black caught her handkerchief, and claimed her hand, he suddenly started back, and uttered one near him.

An incident of this nature always produces universal excitement in a crowded assembly, and, as a matter of course, all dancing ceased on the instant, and all other objects were laid aside, save the grat-must, exhibited a death-like hue, while his prove was beddewed with a profuse and cold prespiration. As it was impossible to keep off the crowd, who, in their anxiety to assertain who was the unfortunate object, threatened to suffocate him, he was re-

He appeared to have come alone to the all, for no one stepped forward to claim cquaintance with hin; fortunately, a and in his; pocket revealed his address, en we returned to the room, peared to be the cause of this singular event, dancing unconcernedly, evidently oblivious of the general comment she was causing. She was eagerly questioned as to the young person to whom her presence had given so sudden a shock, but she steadily persisted in denying; all know-ledge of him. or of any circumstances which could clear up the affair. The intense curiosity, consequently, seemed to subside in almost every one but myself; but it was a long time before I heard the following detail, on which I could place reliance, and which I discovered in my restless anxiety to clear up so great a mystery.

The father of this young man was a mall farmer, near Berlin, who, at an early ge, had been enabled to send his son to be University at Berlin, and who had distantiabled himself as much by his intelearthly.

A thousand trivial incidents strength-ened a love that was mutual, and their minds being tinged with that deep, ro-mantic feeling so prevalent among the youth of Germany, the vows that passed between them were considered as a sacred and indissoluble link in their future des-tiny.

gree, the sather of the gir gave his consent that the betrothal should take place, and a day was appointed to which, it may be imagined, the lovers looked forward with no ordinary feelings of delight.

The great fair at Leipsic took, place a short time before the day on which the;
happy pair were to be betrothed, and to this place Ernest 'masteried to purchase a bridal dress for his mistress from out the splendid treasures that were exhibited.
He selected one of rich and appropriate pattern, with tinted flowers of the most brilliant colors. It is useless to say that his present was received with unbounded approbation, and the following day the fair bride tooked gloriously lovely in her becoming attire. In berlover's eyes she was the very glass of fashion and the mold of form:
The betrothal vows were pronounced, the contract signed, and the muptials fixed for the coming week.

one remain in the dish."

The Jew said, "The last must take the dish with the egg, and he can let it lie there as long as her pleases."

But now it came his turn, and he determined to make a good sweep. After many preliminary compliments, he asked with an air of mischievous friendliness:

"How can a man fry two tront in three pans, so that a tront may lay in each pan."

"Obstatic from them them. Do not said, "Why were such things, made in the world." For thou with the past he year who is acquainted with nature, as thou we also if thou didst find fault because, thou sees them are remarked by a said. The world have a such that a tront may lay in each pan."

"Is he as staunch a Radical as he used

"Death is nothing also than as operation of nature; and if my one is adaid of an operation of nature, he is a child.

"Hun through they little prace of time conformably to nature, and end they journey, in content, just, as an olive falls off when it is ripe, blessing, nature; who produced it, and, thenking, the free spon which it grow."

No one could answer this, and one after another gave him a twelve kreutzer, piece.

But when the mindle desired that he should solve the riddle he rocked to and fro, shrugged his shoulders, and rolled his eyes. "I am a poor Jew," he said at last.

At last, after much persuasion and many promises that they would do him no harm, he thust his hand into his pocketiant doto out one of the twelve kreutzer pieces that he had won, laid it upon the table and said:

"I do not know the answer any more than you. Here are my kreutzers."

When the others heard these words they opened their eyes, and said that this was scarcely according to the agreement. But us they could not foontrol their laughter, and were wealthy and good-natured men, and as the Jew had helped them to while away the time from St. Velt is Schlampi, they let it pass; and the Jew took with him from the vessel—let a good arithmetician reckon up for me how much the Jew carried home with him. He had nine twelve-kreutzer pieces by bis maswers; nine with his own riddle, one, he paid back, and eighteen he gave to the Captain.

of local interest:

In my intercourse with the politicians of Crawford county, I find they are already "red hot" canyassing the claims of aspirants, from Congress down to the lowest office in the gitt-of the people. This county is famous for politicians who never can learn the aublime admonition, "wait and pray;" they can't wait, and won't wait, and therefore there is more or less excitement during every canvass. The most prominent candidate for Senater, especially in the eastern end of the county, is George K. to which an immediate answer is required. The Sussex (Del.) Journal ways. As some boys were playing in an old store-house at Cannon's Ferry, a few days ago they found in an old desk a roll of bank notes on the Farmer's Bank of Baltimore amounting to $800. The bows disposed of some of the notes at ten cents each not thanking that they were of ary value. It is supposed that this money was plated in the desk by Mr. Cannon about thirty years ago, and as he was shot and killed by a desperate fellow named Owens Day, no one knew of its existence, and as the old desk was not used, it was not discovered until found by the boys as above stated.
